The Knox County General Hospital Solicits Support

From all who believe in the maintenance of an institution organized and carried on for the relief of suffering. The Hospital is carried on at a large annual expense which its earnings fall far short of meeting; therefore its continuance from year to year devolves upon the contributions of those who give, in large or small amounts, to the support of worthy institutions.

You Can Help

By giving $5,000 for perpetual free bed; $250 for an annual free bed; $5,000 for naming a ward; $5,000 for naming the operating room; $1,000 for naming a private room; by contributions of furniture, pictures, old cloth for compress, fruit, vegetables, provisions, books, flowers, anything that can be utilized in an institution of this character.

But Most of All Money Is Needed

Can you not afford a cash contribution? No amount is too small, none too large, to do good.

The Courier-Gazette will be glad to receive any funds that its readers in any part of the country may be disposed to forward, and same will be promptly turned over to the Hospital management.

TWICE-A-WEEK

ALL THE HOME NEWS

Published every Tuesday and Saturday morning from 409 Main Street, Rockland, Maine.

The world has no room for cowards. We must all be ready somehow to die, to suffer, to die. And yours is not the noblest because no drum beats before you when you go out into your daily battlefields, and no crowds shout about your coming when you return from your daily victory or defeat.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

The new state of Oklahoma adopted prohibition by a decisive vote.

New York City has 637,287 school children this year. Just think of it, almost as much as Maine's entire population!

A good anecdote is told of Rear Admiral Walker, who died last week. A brisk young naval officer one day rushed into the reception room of the chief of the bureau of navigation and petulantly demanded of the farmer looking person in civilian attire who was walking up and down the room, "Is Walker in?" The plain individual thus addressed stopped short, looked the caller over with a quizzical gaze, and replied with much insinuating deliberation: "Don't be so formal. Call me John." Whereupon the junior naval officer, who had heard much and shared the common fear of the mighty Walker, is said to have collapsed.

A patent has been taken out in Germany on glass telegraph poles and the imperial postal authorities are about to make experiments with these poles, to determine whether they will stand the stress of wind and weather. Preliminary trials have evidently convinced capitalists that such is the case, inasmuch as a company with a capital of half a million marks has already been formed for exploiting the patent. If such poles are profitable in a country with abundant forests like Germany, it is expected that they will be doubly welcomed in France, Italy, Belgium, and other regions where wood is scarce, as well as in tropical countries, where wooden poles are soon destroyed by insects.

MAINE'S FISHERIES.

Commissioner Donohue Delivers Interesting Address Before Board of Trade.

One of the most interesting papers read at the annual meeting of the State Board of Trade in Portland last week was on the subject of Maine's fisheries—a paper compiled and read by Commissioner James Donohue of Rockland. Commissioner Donohue said in part:

Your committee have assigned me a subject entitled "The Importance of Maine's Sea and Shore Fisheries," and it being a subject of so much importance I hesitated as to accepting the task, but fearing if I refused it might not be presented here, and knowing so well the necessity of having it brought to the attention of the public, I decided to give you my version of it from a practical standpoint, having been connected with it directly and indirectly all my life.

Last year the number of people in the state engaged in the fishing industry was about 16,000, furnishing a livelihood to approximately 50,000 of our population. This does not include the fishermen that live in other states, of whom there are a great many, that come to fish in our waters at different seasons of the year when conditions are most favorable. The value of the catch is between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 not including the sardine business which, if added, would bring the grand total in round numbers to about $6,000,000. The total amount of money invested in the business is about $3,000,000.

The lobster industry is the most important branch of our fisheries. This year there are about 3,000 men engaged in it, thereby supporting from 10,000 to 15,000 people. The supply of lobsters in this country is gradually decreasing and the demand and price are increasing. The question of how to increase the supply is a question on which there is a vast difference of opinion.

What are we doing to protect and increase the supply of lobsters? We believe a lobster should not be used until it is 10½ inches long or thereabouts, as under the new way of measuring the body shell at 48, inches is equivalent to 10½ inches, the full length of a lobster. We also protect it and it is unlawful to kill a seed or egg bearing lobster at any time. This state appropriates money and employs men to go along the lobster fishermen, buy all seed lobsters, and as an extra inducement pays 25 per cent more than the regular price of market lobsters, and takes them to the United States Hatchery at Boothbay Harbor, where the eggs stripped and hatched at the proper time and distributed pro rata in the different localities from which the seed lobsters were gathered. This year the hatchery has hatched and distributed along the coast of Maine 140,000 young lobsters. The number of these lobsters, or fry, as they are called, that reach maturity is problematical, but it is safe to say that a very large portion of them do so.

There is a wide difference of opinion as to the best methods of breeding the lobsters, especially among the fishermen. Some think the best result is attained by taking the seed or mother lobster to the hatchery and hatching the young and then liberating along the coast, as is now the practice. Others think that the best way to get results is to allow the lobsters to remain in their natural element and location and breed naturally. On account of this difference of opinion the State has two plans of buying seed lobsters; one is to buy them and take them to the hatchery and have them hatched there; the other, where the fishermen believe they should not be taken from their natural grounds, buy them of the fishermen, pay the same price that they do when taken to the hatchery, and liberate them on the grounds where they are caught. If the fishermen catch the seed lobster a second time the state buys it again, pays the same price and again liberates, and continues that indefinitely. It would seem that that was an expensive method of buying the seed lobster but tests have shown that the same lobster is rarely caught a second time, although it has been demonstrated that the same lobster has been caught and liberated four times in one season, but that is an exception.

It would seem under those conditions, where the State and National Government are using such extreme efforts to protect and increase the supply of lobsters, that they would have the hearty co-operation of every man engaged in the business and also of every citizen of our State who is interested in the welfare of its different industries, but I am sorry to say that is not the case.

The commissioners' last report shows that in 1906 the warden seized and liberated over 50,000 illegal lobsters, and it is safe to say that as that number was multiplied by 100 it would not then amount to the number of illegal lobsters that are destroyed on this coast every year. The total number of legal lobsters caught in 1906 was between eight and nine million, and a fair estimate of the number of small lobsters destroyed would amount to fully 5,000,000. If those small lobsters were allowed to mature there is no reason why we should not have plenty of lobsters at fair prices and the lobster fishermen would earn more money in the business. In my opinion, with the laws of the state properly obeyed and with the new methods now in vogue of hatching and distributing young lobsters, with the large amount of sea-coast on which the lobsters thrive, it would be but a few years before Maine would be in a position to supply the whole country with lobsters at moderate prices.

The old method of enforcing the lobster law, viz., the constant watch of the fishermen by wardens, has not been very successful, and this year we are trying a different method. The department is using every effort to educate the lobstermen to the fact that when he destroys the small lobster he is injuring his own business; and I am happy to state that a very large portion of the fishermen now realize that fact and are banding themselves together in unions all along the coast for the special purpose of protecting the small lobster.

Another department of the sea and shore fisheries of this State that is attracting attention at the present time is the clam. There is no question but that the clam fishery of our State is being depleted very rapidly, especially in some sections, viz.: those located near the canning factories and the summer hotels. The practice of using the small clams to can and also for stews in the hotels, has been the main reason for the shrinkage in the clam supply. The shippers of clams, also the fishermen that use clams for bait, do not use the small clams, as they are not fit for their use. Consequently in digging for clams to market the small clams are allowed to remain in the flats, and if that policy was adopted by all there would always be plenty of clams, as the clam is very prolific and grows very fast. There has been more or less talk about the Legislature passing some kind of a clam law to protect the small clam, but nothing has been done up to the present time.

The statistics show the total value of the clam and scallop for the year 1906 was $55,000, and with the present and future demand for clams that could be doubled if the small clams were allowed to remain in the flats until they were of marketable size. The total number of persons employed in the clam and scallop fishery as per last report was about 1,700.

The scallop fishery is practically a new industry in this State. It is attractive in deep water, and until the advent of the gasoline engine for power in boats that fishery was practically unknown; but since the fishermen have obtained gasoline engines for power to propel their boats and also hold the dredge, that fishery is assuming large proportions and is increasing rapidly each year.

The oyster beds in this State are very small, but in some sections the oyster is shown to have marvelous growth; as in some cases oysters have been taken from the beds that measured 9 inches in length. But I regret to say that the same difficulty confronts us in protecting the oysters that obtains in the protection of the lobster

For Thin, Poor Blood

You can trust a medicine tested 60 years! Sixty years of experience, think of that! Experience with Ayer's Sarsaparilla; the original Sarsaparilla; the strongest Sarsaparilla; the Sarsaparilla the doctors endorse for thin blood, weak nerves, general debility.

But even this grand old medicine cannot do the best work if the liver is inactive and the bowels constipated. For the best possible results, you should take laxative doses of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is a gentle, safe, and will quickly respond, and so will the bowels.

and clam. Unscrupulous people have been known to go to oyster beds and take and destroy the oysters in violation of the law, thereby not giving the Department a chance to see what progress and development could be made in the cultivation of oysters in this State.

The ground-fish, so-called, which include cod, haddock, hake, cusk, pollock, etc., are a class of fish that do not require any protection from the State; with one exception that is, the dog-fish. These pests are a species of shark; they come to our coast usually in May, some years more plentiful than others, and remain here generally until cold weather. The dog-fish question has been talked over in its various phases, and there seems to be but one solution, and that is for the federal government to put a bounty on them and have them caught and destroyed. This would seem to be quite an undertaking, but on account of the way the dog-fish breeds it would not be so difficult as it would seem, as the dog-fish does not spawn like other fish but have their young in litters, similar to the animal after which they are named. A litter of dog-fish averages about 7 young ones, so you can readily see that they do not multiply as fast as the other varieties of fish.

The herring fishery is another of the large branches of our fishing industry, employing more people than any other branch of the industry. As shown by the last statistics, there were over 7,000 people employed in this branch.

The alewife catch has been gradually decreasing year after year, and there are various causes advanced for that result.

The shad fishery, which at one time, especially on the Kennebec river, was of vast importance, is gradually dwindling down to a very small matter, so that the catch now is very light as compared with former years. The cause for the decrease is alleged to be from the effects of the sawmills on the river and the netting of the fish during the spawning period.

The smelt, the smallest of our food fish but one of the best, seem to be holding their own fairly well. The laws protecting them in their spawning seasons are being well observed, although there are a large number of smelts destroyed at times by getting into the herring weirs, and it is impossible for the weirmen to separate them consequently they are killed with the herring.

In the foregoing I have not elaborated as to the largest, outside of the lobster, industry in the State, viz., the packing of sardines, as the extent of this is generally known. There are other minor fisheries which I have not touched upon, as I do not wish to burden you with further detail. It has seemed to me, however, that an explanation of the different industries is essential to a correct understanding of the scope of the fisheries of this State.

Having in a measure given this, I wish now to call to the particular and earnest attention of the State Board of Trade the fact that apart from a few cities and towns in York and Cumberland counties and Rockland in the county of Knox, almost the entire population of the seacoast of this State depend upon the fisheries for their livelihood. Further, it would seem from past experience that the only industry which can flourish on this seacoast and be permanent is the granite. Various attempts have been made in the past to establish manufacturing, which for a time and to a limited extent took the place of the fisheries for certain months in the year, but they have proved a failure. This may be owing to the characteristics of the people, particularly on account of habits long established, and in time there may be a development so that new industries will flourish; but now and under the present conditions there can be no question but what the fisheries industries in one form or another provide a livelihood and a good one for a population which otherwise would not have employment.

The Department of Sea and Shore Fisheries is doing every effort to increase and improve the conditions of this great industry in this State, and urgently request the assistance and co-operation of all law-abiding citizens to attain that end.

MORSE'S FARMING TIPS.

Has a Good Out Crop Selling at Fancy Prices—Squashes Scarce—Good Prospects for Cabbage Raisers.

Frank W. Morse, the agricultural king of Morse's Corner, breezed into The Courier-Gazette office Tuesday and let fall a few chunks of seasonable farming gossip.

First he informed us that he would have about one fifth of a squash crop, there being an average yield of a ton from vines which were scheduled to produce five tons. "But the quality's superb," said Mr. Morse, in a manner that would make a customer buy the squashes even though he detested the vegetable. A majority of Mr. Morse's squashes find their way into his large storehouse, which is equipped with a heater at each end. Is Mr. Morse afraid they will freeze? Hardly! He is farming on progressive principles and has discovered that squashes which are exposed to a drying process will stay as good as new until the middle of the following summer. They shrink in weight, to be sure, but Frank expands the price in the same ratio.

He is chuckling over a prolific out crop, which is second cousin to a gold mine this year with oats fetching 63 cents in the market. Mr. Morse has sold them at 28 cents a bushel and fully appreciates the fact that he can now swap a bag of oats for a bag of corn. His oats this year are first quality, long and heavy-headed.

It will be a great year for cabbages with $25 a ton in prospect when the farmer gets to market.

"I hear that potatoes are rotting badly in the back towns," said Mr. Morse, "but I was fortunate enough to dig mine before the rainy spell and they are looking first-rate."

People who go to the Union fair next week will have a chance to see Mr. Morse's twin Holstein steers, which he is ready to match against anything in the country.

LETTER TO CAPT. L. B. KEENE
Rockland, Me.

Dear Sir: Experience teaches some people sometimes; it teaches a few some things; it's a mighty slow school though, that same experience. Lots of people paint lead-and-oll, paint once in three years, and think themselves wise; they are wasting half their money and fuss. They're so sure they are wise, they die as they live, paint-foolish. Experience teaches them nothing.

There's another set, who buy paint by the gallon, and go by the price of a gallon. They think one price is high, and another is low; and they pay about middling; why don't they pay low? They know that milk isn't dear or "cheap" paint and pay double. Experience has something to do with it. They don't buy "cheap" milk, but they buy "cheap" paint and pay double. Experience teaches them nothing.

There's another set. They painted years ago lead-and-oll; exhausted that. Then tried something else; it was better or worse. Then Devor; it cost about half and wore twice as long. That's how experience teaches some of us.

Yours truly

F. W. DEVOR.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

The Choir of the Daybreak
I sat by my window at daybreak
As the wildbirds caroled the hour,
And watched the shades of the night time
Drop 'neath the morning's power.
And as the banners of sunrise
Flung their colors above the trees,
The burst of light charmed the bird-notes
Into sweeter melodies.
The wren, the linnet and robin,
The oriole, cat-bird and jay,
And all the choir of the tree-tops,
Sung and sang and gay,
And with notes unknown to mortals,
With harmonies as grandly fair
As the soul's unuttered music,
They piped on the morning air.
The daybreak's freshness and grandeur,
And the songs of the happy birds,
Commingled a tender beauty
That cannot be told in words,
And a gladness settled o'er me
That lifted me out of the cares,
That yesterday lay upon me
In the burden of affairs.
And my heart commingled with angels
On the sacred memories massed
In the stalls of recollection
Scattered all along the past,
And the future's brilliant finger
In a beckoning gesture shined,
A strange, glad impulse awakening,
That cannot be defined.
O the glory of the morning,
And the wildbirds' heaven-made song!
O the good that is created
To take the place of wrong!
But the fondest hours of lifetime,
And the gladdest moments of joy,
Do they teach us always, sweetheart,
The love of the great Unseen?

Moral: Don't eat mince pie late at night.

Rev. W. W. Carver and nine other representatives of the Free Baptist church attended the quarterly meeting in Montville the last of the week. They were conveyed on Orville T. Wood's backboard leaving here Friday and returning late Sunday afternoon, the ride being greatly enjoyed. This week Mr. Wood will have his rapid transit apparatus at Union fair.

A prominent physician from South Framingham, Mass., who recently bought imported wall decorations at Crle's in this city, said he had been all over New England but got better service and saw better materials here than any other place he had visited. Such a reputation certainly does Rockland no harm. Mr. Crle has just painted a large sign for W. E. Vinal's dry goods emporium in Thomaston.

The steamship Lusitania, in whose maiden voyage across the Atlantic many of our readers were so greatly interested, is on her way to Queenstown, and it is expected she will easily eclipse the eastward record of 5 days, 8 hours and 38 minutes, made by the Lucania in 1894. Many believe that she will beat the speed record of the Kaiser Wilhelm II, which set a high water mark of 23.58 knots average on a transatlantic passage in 1904.

The opening of the roller skating season at the Arcade Saturday afternoon and evening brought out a large number of the old fans and quite a number of novices. A raised platform has been erected in the center of the floor and from that point of vantage Farnham's Quintet dispensed popular music. The day was a very warm one for exercise like roller skating but all had a good time and it looks as though the season were to be a popular and successful one. The next skating will be Wednesday afternoon and evening.

The "Syndicate" will begin a series of assemblies Oct. 8, with a picnic supper. It is undecided yet whether the dances will be held at the Grange hall, Glen Cove, or at a hall in this city. Farnham's orchestra has been engaged for the opening assembly.

W. R. Chapman is to be here Thursday evening and will direct the Wight Philharmonic, therefore every member is desired to be present. Mr. Chapman will have much to tell about the coming Festival that will be worth listening to.

The members of The Courier-Gazette "Exposition" party arrived home from Jamestown this morning, having had a thoroughly delightful trip, marked by good weather. The adventures of the party will be set forth in a letter written by Miss Loring which will appear in our Saturday issue.

John W. Thomas, Knox county agent for the Maine Music Festival, will have tickets for Calve night, Wednesday, Oct. 9, by Thursday of this week. As there is a great demand for tickets to hear this pair of all opera singers, Mr. Thomas can have the tickets but a few days, so those who call early will have best choice.

THE CALVE CONCERT.

Owing to the tremendous demand for single tickets for the Calve concert, and in order that the out of town people may not be disappointed on reaching Portland to find that it will be impossible to procure a seat the management have decided to send to some of their agents in the larger towns blocks of tickets to be sold to the residents there.

Mme. Calve and her artists, Mile. Chomet, and Mons. Deceuse, Mr. Chapman's superb New York Orchestra, and the great Festival Chorus in their most popular numbers, form the greatest concert combination that can be imagined. From present indications this will be the most brilliant audience ever assembled in Maine. Never in the history of the Festival have so many demands come for tickets and the management are trying to keep the Calve tickets from the hands of speculators. The tickets will arrive here about Sept. 26 and can be purchased only through the local agent, Mr. Thomas, at The Courier-Gazette office. Applications should be made at once to him. These tickets will remain in your town four days, after which they will be sold at price as marked on each ticket. Never in the history of Maine has there been such a great concert. The expense of the same to the management is between $500 and $600 and no one that has the slightest love for music can fail to be present on this great occasion. All the concerts of the entire Festival are the most interesting since the organization of the Festival. The grand opera night is a close second to the Calve performance. The greatest cast that can be procured in America will appear, Janet Spencer, Daniel Beddoe, Cecil Fanning and others.

GOOD FOR BATH.

Secretary Metcalf has awarded the contract for the construction of five torpedo boat destroyers, provision for and bids for which were opened at the Navy Department recently. ### EXCESSIVE DRINKING

Orrine Destroys the Craving for Drink
Sold Under Positive Guarantee.

Excessive or continued use of alcoholic beverages always results in a diseased condition of the nervous system. The drinking man is often heard to say, "I can stop of my own free will and when I wish," but the poor fellow is now devoid of the power to act at the proper time and in the right way, —it's too late, the craving has secured a firm hold and because of the diseased nervous system he has not the ability to sustain effort. The result we all know.

Drunkennes is no longer considered a crime; eminent scientists and physicians have agreed that it is a disease and must be treated as such. The home treatment that has been used for a number of years, and is highly successful, is Orrine. It is sold under a positive guarantee that if it does not effect a cure your money will be refunded.

Orrine is in two forms. When desiring to give secretly, purchase Orrine No. 1, and if the patient will voluntarily take the treatment, Orrine No. 2 should be given. The guarantee is the same in either case. Orrine costs but $1 per box. Mailed in plain sealed wrapper on receipt of price. ## SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Among the guests at a society ball in New York are Miss Rita Van Arsdale, who has studied nursing and who tells the story; her lover, Anson Durand; Mrs. Fairbrother, who wears a magnificent diamond, and a distinguished Englishman, Durand, who is a dealer in gems, is interested in the diamond. Rita sees the vision of a man reflected in a supper room window. Mrs. Fairbrother is found stabbed to death in an alcove. The diamond is missing.

CHAPTER II.—The diamond is found in a pair of Mrs. Fairbrother's gloves placed in Rita's handbag by Durand.

CHAPTER III.—Durand declares that Mrs. Fairbrother asked him to hold her gloves without his knowledge that the diamond was in them. After the murder, fearing suspicion, he placed the gloves in Rita's bag. A splash of blood is discovered on Durand's shirt front.

CHAPTER IV.—Grey, the Englishman, shows great interest in the diamond, now in the possession of a police inspector. It is handed to him for inspection. A shrill cry is heard, and he drops it. A waiter hands it back. Grey explains the cry as the usual historical warning heard before the death of one of his family. He is worried about his daughter, who is ill at a hotel. Grey declares that the stone in the inspector's possession is only paste. Before her death Mrs. Fairbrother received a warning note, handed in at the alcove window. She had been at odds with her husband, who is in the southwest.

CHAPTER V.—Rita tries to account for the murder and the disappearance of the diamond. Fairbrother is ill with pneumonia in New Mexico.

CHAPTER VI.—A newspaper correspondent hears Fairbrother declare that the gem worn by his wife was genuine.

CHAPTER VII.—Fairbrother is too ill to be examined in relation to the murder. Durand is arrested on the murder charge.

CHAPTER VIII.—Rita tells Inspector Dalzell that she suspects Grey of the murder. Just before the murder she saw him lifting two cups from a tray left near the alcove. The stiletto bears the heraldic device of the Grey family.

CHAPTER IX.—Grey is known to be a collector of diamonds, and his daughter is known to have sent a message to the ballroom on the night of the murder.

CHAPTER X.—By arrangement with the inspector Rita undertakes to nurse Miss Grey and keep a watch on the latter's father. It is learned that Grey made inquiries about the diamond.

CHAPTER XII.

"THIS is your patient. Your new nurse, my dear. What did you say your name is? Miss Ayers?"

"Yes, Mr. Grey, Alice Ayers."

"Oh, what a sweet name!"

This expressive greeting from the patient herself, was the first heart-sting I received, a sting which brought a flush into my cheek which I would fain have kept down.

"Since a change of nurses was necessary I am glad they sent me one like you," the feeble but musical voice went on, and I saw a wasted but eager hand stretched out.

In a whirl of strong feeling I advanced to take it. I had not counted on such a reception. I had not expected any bond of congeniality to spring up between this high feeling English girl and myself to make my purpose hateful to me. Yet as I stood there looking down at her bright, if wasted, face I felt that it would be very easy to love so gentle and cordial a being and dreaded raising my eyes to the gentleman at my side lest I should see something in him to hamper me and make this attempt, which I had undertaken in such loyalty of spirit, a misery to myself and ineffectual to the man I had hoped to save by it. When I did look up and catch the first beams of Mr. Grey's keen blue eyes fixed inquiringly on me, I neither knew what to think nor how to act. He was tall and firmly knit and had an intellectual aspect altogether. I was conscious of regarding him with a decided feeling of awe and found myself forgetting why I had come there and what my suspicions were, suspicions which had carried hope with them, hope for my-

"She shall be well guarded," said I. "You may trust me to keep her from all avoidable knowledge of this crime." He bowed, and I was about to leave his presence when he detained me by remarking, with the air of one who felt that some explanation was necessary:

"I was a, the ball where this crime took place. Naturally it has made a deep impression on me and would on her if she heard of it."

"Assuredly," I murmured, wondering if he would say more and how I should have the courage to stand there and listen if he did.

"It is the first time I have ever come in contact with crime," he went on with what in one of his reserved nature seemed a hardly natural insistence. "I could well have been spared the experience. A tragedy with which one has been even thus remotely connected produces a lasting effect upon the mind."

"Oh, yes; oh, yes!" I murmured, edging involuntarily toward the door. Did I not know? Had I not been there too—little I, whom he stood gazing down upon from such a height, little realizing the fatality which united us and, what was even a more overwhelming thought to me at the moment, the fact that of all persons in the world the shrinking little being into whose eyes he was then looking was perhaps his greatest enemy and

TUMORS CONQUERED

Overwhelming Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a conquering of woman's dread enemy, Tumor.

The growth of a tumor is so insidious that frequently its presence is wholly unsuspected until it is well advanced.

So called "wandering pains" may come from its early stages or the presence of danger may be made manifest by excessive monthly periods or displacements, secure a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, right away and begin its use.

The following letters should convince every suffering woman of its virtue, and that it actually does conquer tumors.

Mrs. May Fry, of 836 W. Colfax Ave., South Bend, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I take great pleasure in writing to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I also took the Blood Purifier in alternate doses with the Compound. Your medicine removed a cyst tumor of four years' growth, which three of the best physicians declared I had. They had said that only an operation could help me. I am very thankful that I followed a friend's advice and took your medicine. It has made me a healthy and well woman and I shall recommend it as long as I live."

Mrs. E. F. Hayes, of 26 Ruggles St., Boston, Mass., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have been under different doctors' treatment for a long time without relief. They told me I had a fibroid tumor, my abdomen was swollen and I suffered with great pain. I wrote to you for advice, you replied and I followed your directions carefully and today I am a well woman. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system."

Mrs. Perry Byers, of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, writes:

the one person, great or small, from whom he had the most to fear. But I was no enemy to his gentle daughter and the relief I felt at finding myself thus cut off by my own promise from even the remotest communication with her on this forbidden subject was genuine and sincere.

But the father! What was I to think of the father? Alas! I could have but one thought, admirable as he appeared in all lights save the one in which his too evident connection with this crime had placed him. I spent the hours of the afternoon in vainly watching the sleeping face of my patient, too sweetly calm in its repose, or so it seemed, for the mind beneath to harbor such doubts as were shown in the warning of dread I noticed in her, vain efforts to explain by any other hypothesis than that of guilt, the extraordinary evidence which linked this man of great affairs and the loftiest repute to a crime involving both theft and murder.

Nor did the struggle end that night. It was renewed with still greater poignancy the next day, as I witnessed the glances which from time to time passed between this father and daughter—glances full of doubt and question on both sides, but not exactly such doubt or such question as my suspicions called for. Or so I thought, and spent another day or two hesitating very much over my duty, when, coming unexpectedly upon Mr. Grey one evening, I felt all my doubts revive in view of the extraordinary expression of dread I noticed in her, still greater truth say fear, which informed his features and made them, to my unaccustomed eyes, almost unrecognizable.

He was sitting at his desk in reverie over some papers which he seemed not to have touched for hours, and when, at some movement I made, he started up and met my eye. I could swear that his cheek was pale, the firm carriage of his body shaken, and the whole man a victim to some strong and secret apprehension he vainly sought to hide. When I ventured to tell him what I wanted, he made an effort and pulled himself together, but I had seen him with his mask off, and his usually calm visage and self-possessed mien could not again deceive me.

My duties kept me mainly at Miss Grey's bedside, but I had been provided with a little room across the hall, and to this room I retired very soon after this first rest and a necessary understanding with myself.

For, in spite of this experience and my now settled convictions, my purpose required wetting. The indescribable charm, the extreme refinement and nobility of manner observable in both Mr. Grey and his daughter were producing their effect. I felt guilty—constrained. Whatever my convictions, the impulse to act was leaving me. How could I recover it? By thinking of Anson Durand and his present disgraceful position.

Anson Durand! Oh, how the feeling surged up in my breast as that name slipped from my lips on crossing the threshold of my little room! Anson Durand, whom I believed innocent, whom I loved, but whom I was betraying with every moment of hesitation in which I allowed myself to indulge! What if the Hon. Mr. Grey is an eminent statesman, a dignified, scholarly, and to all appearance, high-minded man? What if my patient is sweet, dove-eyed and affectionate? Had not Anson Durand's excellent in their way, rights as certain and a high honor myself superior to any claims which another might advance? Drawing a much crumpled little note from my pocket, I eagerly read it. It was the only one I had of her writing. The only letter he had ever written me. I had already read it a hundred times, but as I read more repeatedly to myself I well know I felt my heart grow strong and fixed in the determination which had brought me into this family.

Restoring the letter to its place, I opened my gripsack and from its inmost recesses drew forth an object which I had no sooner in hand than a natural sense of disquietude led me to glance apprehensively, first at the door,

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was told by my physician that I had a fibroid tumor and that I would have to be operated upon. I wrote to you for advice, which I followed carefully and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am not only cured of the tumor but other female troubles and can do all my own work after eight years of suffering."

Mrs. S. J. Barber, of Scott, N. Y., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Sometime ago I wrote you for advice about a tumor which the doctors thought would have to be removed. Instead I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to-day am a well woman."

Mrs. M. M. Funk, Vandergrift, Pa., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had a tumor and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removed it for me after two doctors had given me up. I was sick four years before I began to take the Compound. I now recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound far and near."

Such testimony as above is convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for Tumors, Growths as well as other distressing ills of women, and such symptoms as Bearing-down Sensations, Displacements, Irregularities and Backache, etc.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice. She is the Mrs. Pinkham who has been advising sick women free of charge for more than twenty years, and before that she assisted her mother-in-law, Lydia E. Pinkham, in advising. Thus she is especially well qualified to guide sick women back to health.

Mrs. Pinkham's Invitation to Women.

then at the window, though I had locked the one and shut the other. It seemed as if some other eye besides my own must be gazing at what I held so gingerly in hand; that the walls were watching me, if nothing else, and the sensation this produced was so exactly like that of guilt (or what I imagined to be guilt), that I was forced to repeat once more to myself that it was not a good man's overhrow I sought, or even a bad man's immunity from punishment, but the truth, the absolute truth. No name could equal that which I should feel, by any overdelicacy now, I failed to save the man who trusted me.

The article which I held—have you guessed it?—was the stiletto with which Mrs. Fairbrother had been killed. It had been entrusted to me by the police for a definite purpose. The time for testing that purpose had come, or so nearly come, that I felt I must be thinking about the necessary ways and means.

Unwinding the folds of tissue paper in which the stiletto was wrapped, I

It seemed as if some other eye besides my own must be gazing at what I held, scrutinized the weapon very carefully. Hitherto I had seen only pictures of it; now I had the article itself in my hand. It was not a cultural one for a young woman to hold, a woman whose taste ran more toward healing than inflicting wounds, but I forced myself to forget why the end of its blade was rusty and looked mainly at the device which ornamented the handle. I had not been mistaken in them. They belonged to the house of Grey and to none other. It was a legitimate inquiry I had undertaken. However the matter ended, I should always have these historic devices for my excuse.

My plan was to lay this dagger on Mr. Grey's desk at a moment when he would be sure to see it and I to see him. If he betrayed a guilty knowledge of this fatal steel; if, unconscious of my presence, he showed surprise and apprehension, then we should know how to proceed; justice would be loosed from constraint and the police feel at liberty to approach him. It was a delicate task, this, I realized how delicate when I had thrust the stiletto out of sight under my nurse's apron and started to cross the hall. Should I find the library clear? Would the opportunity be given me to approach his desk, or should I have to carry this guilty witness of a world famous crime on my own person? Mrs. Grey's room and with its unholy outline pressing a semblance of itself upon my breast sit at that innocent pillow, meet those innocent eyes and answer the gentle inquiries which now and then fell from the sweetest lips I have ever seen smile into the face of a lonely, preoccupied stranger?

The arrangement of the rooms was such as made it necessary for me to pass through this sitting room in order to reach my patient's bedroom.

With careful tread, so timid as not to appear stealthy, I accordingly advanced and pushed open the door. The room was empty. Mr. Grey was still with his daughter and I could cross the floor without fear. But never had I entered upon a task requiring more courage or one more obnoxious to my natural instincts. I hated each step I took, but I loved the man for whom I took those steps, and moved resolutely on. Only, as I reached the chair in which Mr. Grey was accustomed to sit, I found that it was easier to plan an action than to carry it out. Home life and the domestic virtues had always appealed to me more than a man's greatness. The position which this man held in his own country, his usefulness there, even his prestige as statesman and scholar, were facts, but very dreamy facts, to me, while his feelings as a father, the place he held in his daughter's heart—these were real to me, these I could understand, and it was of these and not of his place as a man, that this his favorite seat spoke to me. How often had I beheld him sit by the hour with his eyes on the door behind which his one darling lay! Even now it was easy for me to recall his face as I had sometimes caught a glimpse of it through the crack of the suddenly opened door, and I felt my breast heave and my hand falter as I drew forth the stiletto and moved to place it where his glance would fall upon it on his leaving his daughter's bedside.

But my hand returned quickly to my breast and fell back again empty. A pile of letters lay before me on the open lid of the desk. The top one was addressed to me with the word "Important" written in the corner. I did not know the writing, but I felt that I should open and read this letter before committing myself or those who stood back of me to this desperate undertaking.

Glancing behind me and seeing that the door into Miss Grey's room was ajar, I caught up this letter and rushed with it back into my own room. As I hurried, it was from the inspector, and as I read it I realized that I had received it not one moment too soon. In language purposely noncommittal, but of a meaning not to be mistaken, it advised me that some unforeseen facts had come to light which altered all former suspicions and made the little surprise I had planned no longer necessary.

There was no allusion to Mr. Durand, but the final sentence ran: "Drop all care and give your undivided attention to your patient."

and you are just right. The Child or Adult who has these symptoms, surely has Worms, but people imagine that if the Worms are expelled, the patient will be cured. People are not ill so much because they have Worms, as that they have Worms because they are ill. Consequently the violent medicines, drugs and other means used to destroy Worms, either entirely fail in effecting it, or inflict great injury upon the health.

SIMONTON'S DEPARTMENT STORE

Mrs. J. G. Elper and Mrs. Nancy P. Gardner spent Sunday with Mrs. Nellie Spear, West Meadows.

Mrs. Amos Oxtom of West Rockport, spent Tuesday with her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Benner, Old County Road.

Mrs. Nancy P. Gardner of Belfast is visiting her sons, Warren, Charles and Jonathan at the Highlands.

Mrs. B. Benner, Jr., wife and son Maurice, spent Sunday at W. N. Benner's, West Meadows.

The new home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Winslow, corner of Masonic and High streets, was becomingly "warmed" Friday evening, when a company of some 35 persons of the Courier-Gazette force and their allies swooped down on the premises.

The occasion was a cleverly prepared surprise to City Editor Winslow, the arrangements being completed by Miss Rose McNamara and Miss Helen York, with Mrs. Winslow's indispensable assistance. When Mr. Winslow arrived home for his frugal evening meal he was astounded to discover the house in a brilliant illumination, the rooms thronged with fair women and brave men and, best of all, and reconciling him to everything, three tables spread and groaning beneath all sorts of delicious refreshments. After rushing down street for cigars, the surprised host joined in the festivities of the table, at which he wrought even better than usual (which is to say a good deal) being closely followed by the guests, who apparently never more enjoyed eating. The remainder of the evening was spent in a mass of informal character, cards of various sorts and conversation. During a lull in proceedings Mr. and Mrs. Winslow were presented with a handsome Moris chair, W. O. Fuller, Jr., making the presentation remarks to which Mr. Winslow gracefully responded, remarking besides that the evening was the happiest of his life. At a late hour the company broke up, with congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Winslow upon their beautiful new home. Mrs. Winslow was assisted in the entertaining by Mrs. E. B. Ingraham, Mrs. E. C. Moran, Miss Jennie Thorndike and Miss Ruby Thorndike.

Mrs. Chas. Thornton and son have returned from a visit in Waterville.

Mrs. P. McAuliffe and son Lawrence have returned from a week's visit in Waterville, where they attended the Central Maine Fair.

Raymond Stewart, driver for the American Express Co., has returned from his old home in Bremen, where he has been spending his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Harwood of Boston are guests of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Frohock, Park street.

J. S. Jenkins, local manager of the Swift Beef Co., is spending a week's vacation in Jonesport, his former home.

Mrs. Frank Simmons of Everett, Mass., formerly of Rockland, and her sister, Mrs. Chas. Stevens, left on the boat Friday night for Everett, Mass. Mrs. Stevens will stay a few weeks.

Mrs. A. T. Blackington left Monday morning for Augusta, where she will visit in Judge Hall's family. Mrs. Blackington accompanied by Miss Hall will attend the Festival at Bangor.

H. S. Ware and wife of New York, who have been the guests of Mrs. W. A. H. Newbert, the past three weeks have returned home. Mrs. M. F. Hanley of Appleton was the guest of her sister, Mrs. A. H. Newbert, last week.

Mrs. Lucia Fairfield of Patten is the guest of her brother, M. M. Parker, Warren street.

Eugene Arey and wife of Camden are at G. B. Cates, Warren street, where they will spend the winter.

Mrs. J. H. Boynton of Lexington, Mass. arrived yesterday to attend the wedding of her sister, Miss Adelaide M. Crocker, and W. C. Dart, which takes place at the bride's home on the evening of Oct. 2.

Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Gloyd are in North Adams, Mass., visiting their daughter, Mrs. Roy Small.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol relieves indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol for dyspepsia does not only relieve indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy helps all stomach troubles by cleansing purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says: "I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in my family."

THOSE SPLITTING HEADACHES!

Sick, Nervous or Neuralgic Headaches Cured by Simple Anodyne.

Nothing is more distressing and weakening than a headache. It takes all the tuck out of anyone and drives the sufferer to a darkened bed-room so that work has to be neglected. A 25 ct. bottle of Neuralgic Anodyne will save many days of pain and weakness, as it is guaranteed to cure or relieve any form of headache or the money will be refunded. It differs from other headache remedies, as it is used internally and externally, thus reaching the source of the nerve pains, strengthening the whole nervous system, and at the same time finding its way locally through the pores of the skin to the aching tissues and throbbing nerves.

Neuralgic Anodyne is also invaluable in relieving and curing neuralgic rheumatism, and is sold everywhere. Made by The Twichell-Champion Co., Portland, Me.

The Courier-Gazette goes into a larger number of families in Knox county than any other paper published.

In Theatrical Circles.

THE MAYOR OF LAUGHLAND. Judging from the interest already manifested the appearance of Tom Waters and his company in the "Mayor of Laughland" at the Farwell opera house tonight will be an event.

New England friends the first sight of it and his pleadings have proved successful. The book of "Happy Days" is by Kellett Chambers and the music by Gus Edwards. "Happy Days" will be at Farwell opera house Oct. 17.

Scene from "The Choir Singer," at Farwell Opera House, Wednesday Sept. 25.

of the greatest importance to local theatregoers. Waters is very well known and well liked in this part of the country. His many friends will be pleased to learn that Messrs. Nixon & Zimmerman now have this young comedian under a long contract, and have given him a most elaborate production for his first tour under their management. All special scenery is used and there are fine effects in costuming, together with a large chorus of pretty girls.

HAPPY DAYS. When Wm. A. Brady secured the new musical comedy "Happy Days" for Al Leech the peculiar comedian, he desired to open with the new play in New York. But Mr. Leech had something to say about that. There are a few cities in New England in which Mr. Leech has always been a great favorite and he wanted to go there first. So after considerable argument Mr. Leech won his point and "Happy Days" will be played for a brief season in a few of the New England cities, before it goes into New York. A New York run is indefinite and sometimes is very long as Mr. Brady has evidence in his unsuccessful play "The Man of the Hour," which is now in its second year in New York. Mr. Leech believes that in "Happy Days" he has the best medium for fun making of his successful career—and Mr. Brady agrees with him but he wanted to give his old

THE CHOIR SINGER. Endorsed by press and public is the general verdict by all who have seen the performance of "The Choir Singer." In the second act a beautiful effect is produced through the ingenious arrangement of the lights, whereby both the exterior of the picturesque rural church is displayed, and at the same time the interior disclosing the congregation seated in the pews, the clergyman and organist in their proper places and "Alice Leighton" standing at the choir rail singing for the last time before her forced departure for New York, where she takes up the struggle for fame and fortune as a public singer. From a scenic standpoint, probably the most effective scene in "The Choir Singer" is that in which the stage of a New York Roof Garden is reproduced in the minutest detail; lighted by myriads of electric bulbs. It is here that the heroine makes her first appearance as a public singer, and on her success or failure depends the saving of her old home in Virginia. The "Choir Singer" will be seen here at Farwell opera house on tomorrow night, Wednesday, Sept. 25.

GAGE STOCK COMPANY. The Gage Stock Company, supporting Miss Ret Davis, will open a five nights' engagement at the Farwell opera house, commencing Monday, Oct. 14. Monday night as usual will be given over to the ladies, and as this will be the first popular priced attraction of the season, the local play house will be packed to the doors.

THE HONEYMOONERS. "The Honeymooners," Geo. M. Cohan's three act musical farce, will be an important attraction at Farwell opera house, Friday, Oct. 11. "The Honeymooners" will be seen here with the same splendid production in every detail witnessed during its three months engagement at the Amsterdam Theatre Roof in New York. The company is one of the largest on tour, the cast is a notable one, while the chorus, consisting mostly of dancing girls, is an attractive feature. For this play Mr. Cohan has composed some of his most catchy music, all of which has attained immense popularity.

MISS PETTICOATS. One great charm of "Miss Petticoats" is its exceeding fidelity to nature and this appears even in its comedy, for its humor, although irresistibly funny, is never strained but as natural as the old sea captain's themselves in their native element. Agnes Renier, the heroine, was called "Miss Petticoats" as a pet name by her grand-father, Capt. Stewart, when she lived with him in the cabin of the old whaler and it stuck to her through her progress to the high position she attained as the Countess Fornay. She is a most lovable heroine and demonstrates the true strength of womanhood through severe trials and sorrows. This remarkable play is full of the flavor of an ancient seaport town and its refreshing original style of characters; the quartette of
